Join an AAP Section and See What Sections Have to Offer!

An AAP Section is an organized body of AAPs who share an interest in a medical or surgical pediatric subspecialty or multidisciplinary area within pediatrics. Sections are devoted to improving the care of infants, children, adolescents, and young adults primarily through education in their respective areas.

Sections represent the medical and surgical subspecialists on issues related to pediatrics, ensuring that they are heard by the AAP and the medical community.

Sections’ educational activities range from seminars and CME courses to manuals, policy statements, training program directories, and newsletters. Many Section projects address new techniques and exciting developments in the pediatric subspecialty areas.

New Sections that address child abuse, disabilities, sports medicine, home health, practice management, and more keep pediatricians abreast of breaking topics and issues that help them provide better service to their patients every day.

As an AAP Section member, you will receive the following benefits:

- newsletters featuring updates, literature reviews, abstracts, and more;
- special access to section programs at Academy national meetings;
- networking opportunities with other professionals with similar interests;
- a venue to suggest and develop educational programs and projects;
- the opportunity to share your expertise on subcommittees addressing issues such as curriculum development, policy work, and more; and
- the opportunity to provide input and direction to one of the most vital and active branches of the Academy.

For a complete list of AAP Sections and more information about becoming a member, contact the Division of Sections at 800/433-9016, ext 6759.
