Presented by...
Deborah Prothrow-Stith, M.D.
Assistant Dean of Government and Community Programs,
Harvard School of Public Health

Deborah Prothrow-Stith, M.D., is a nationally recognized public health leader with applied and academic experience ranging from involvement with neighborhood clinics and inner city hospitals, to service as State Commissioner of Health and Dean at the Harvard School of Public Health.

As the first woman — and youngest ever — Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Health, Dr. Prothrow-Stith expanded treatment programs for AIDS and drug rehabilitation, and provided leadership on issues such as environmental health, tuberculosis, and immunizations. During her tenure she established the first office of violence prevention in a public health department.

Dr. Prothrow-Stith's interest in violence prevention began when she was a resident at Boston City Hospital. The typical "stitch them up, send them out" sentiment led her to examine violence as a societal "disease" that could be prevented through public health strategies.

Dr. Prothrow-Stith developed and wrote the first violence prevention curriculum for schools and co-wrote Deadly Consequences, the first book to present the public health perspective on violence to a mass audience. She seeks to support the application of rigorous scientific methods to violence prevention programs, the expansion of public knowledge, and the strengthening of local, state and federal programs for the prevention of violence.

AAP Family Program and Brunch: "All About Ears"

Monday, October 28th -
10:45 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Boston Children’s Museum

Join us at the Children’s Museum waterfront exhibit center in Boston for a variety of specially created programs focusing on “ears” and hearing, featuring fun-filled, hands-on exhibits for children and their parents. AAP members and their families will enjoy free access to permanent exhibits at the museum, which will be closed to the general public. Lunch will be served.

A complimentary ticket is required for admission. Please indicate the quantity needed on your registration form.

The Family Program and Brunch, including transportation to and from the Children’s Museum, is provided through a grant from Pfizer Inc.

For more information, please refer to your registration program or contact the AAP Division of Meeting and Travel Services at (800) 433-9016, ext. MEET (6338).
