The DHA omega-3 that redefined infant formula is now available as a new supplement for pregnant and nursing mothers.

Introducing Expecta™ LIPIL®
A DHA Supplement from Mead Johnson Nutritionals containing Martek DHA™

DHA, the omega-3 fatty acid that made infant formula more nutritionally complete, is now available as a new dietary supplement for pregnant and nursing women. DHA is a major structural component of an infant’s developing brain and eyes. It is therefore important that mothers obtain adequate amounts during pregnancy and while breastfeeding. Unfortunately, American women typically consume less than 100 mg/day of DHA, far below an expert panel recommendation of 300 mg/day for pregnant and nursing women. To help moms bridge the gap and provide recommended levels of DHA to their developing infants, recommend Expecta™ LIPIL® a new product from Mead Johnson. It contains the same DHA found in Enfamil® LIPIL® infant formulas and can be taken with any prenatal supplement.

To learn more about DHA and Expecta™ LIPIL®, call 1-888-4EXPECTA or talk to your Mead Johnson representative.
