ATTENTION DISORDERS with or without Hyperactivity defined by Rona Gillman, M.Ed., Esther Stiator, M.D., Arlert Sprengel, Ph.D.

Accurate diagnosis of ADHD is often difficult because approximately 80% of ADHD children behave well in the doctor’s office. For this reason, physicians rely heavily on feedback from classroom teachers in diagnosing, medicating, and monitoring children with attention disorder.

ACTERS is a standardized teacher rating form for grades K-8 that objectively measures four separate characteristics: Attention, Hyperactivity, Impulsive Behavior, and Social Skills. The reliability, validity, and utility of ACTERS have been demonstrated in published studies and clinical trials throughout the past 15 years. Teachers respond to the 24 items that describe classroom behavior. These ratings are summed and transferred to the Profile Format where norm comparisons are read directly.

Interim Forum for Senior Members

The Interim Forum for Senior Members, soon to be known as the Provisional Senior Section, held its first annual forum and between meeting on October 10, 1992 during the Annual Meeting of the Academy in San Francisco. Of the approximately 1,000 current members, 100 attended the all-day program, featuring AAP activity update, the first annual business meeting, and a program of education about retirement planning.

Plans for a program and meeting during the Annual Meeting in Washington in 1993 were outlined, and Committees were further organized.

The new “Section-to-be” is thriving, is publishing a Bulletin, and growing in appeal and interest.

Get word of the Academy upon reaching the age of 65 years, and with interests in the problems and affairs of senior pediatricians, are invited to join in this activity. Address inquiries to Dr. Kenneth Slaw, Staff Liaison, at AAP Headquarters.
